later viewing. "The Bete Noire" is a tough little rodent that is a regular visitor to the backyard of pet owners, infesting their plants, gardens and nests. Typically it is a solitary, nocturnal rodent, but sometimes it is found in groups. Appearance As a traditional name, the "black rat" is used to describe these mice, usually about two inches long. They have a black body, and their coat is typically black with a white belly. They are nocturnal, meaning they are active at night. In fact, the Latin term nocturnus means "night." Distribution They can be found across the world, but they are most common in Europe and North America. In the United States, they can be found from Alaska and the northern plains to Mexico and California. In Europe, they are found in Britain, Germany and other parts of Europe. Food Habits The "black rat" is a granivore
